PROGRAM: The Human Side of Collaboration

SPEAKER: Gregg Schoppman, Principal, FMI

Whether it is the gridiron or our jobsites, we are inundated with the concept of strong teams and effective collaboration. However, these two concepts are not always unified. Put another way, we want our teams of construction A-E-C professionals, owners, end-users to collaborate and push for the same goals. However, is it a pipe dream to wish for something that pits individual teams that are diametrically opposed to truly collaborate? How can a group of individuals and teams collaborate regardless of the delivery method achieve win-win results. Let's put the F-U-N in functional teams!

The participants will learn:

- Discover the inhibitors of internal and external collaboration and examine the root causes of failure
- Identify the core elements of team success
- Identify and discover the process, tools, and metrics that enable successful collaboration from happening
- Engage in a workshop to bridge across firms, business units, projects, and individuals to illustrate the power of high performing teams

For 70+ years, FMI Corporation has been a leader in passionately helping engineering and construction firms throughout North America develop their firm's vision, teams, and succession plans. Additionally, FMI provides a full cadre of E/C business services.
